

As a team:

- Number 11 in PPDA
- Number 12 in forward pass share
- Number 2 in the number of successful crosses
- Number 10 in successful forward passes
- Number 4 in long pass share
- Number 4 in progressive passes per match
- 10th in expected points for the season

Conclusions:

Randers doesn't press high with high intensity. They don't play forward a lot. But they play long and progressive when they do. They cross the ball a lot and they are good at it.

Players:

Expected formation: 4-4-2/4-3-3 (number of matches they have started)

M. Simonsen (5/5)

E. Bramsen (2/5)

M. Henning (3/5)

C. Østergaard (3/5)

F. Konstmann (4/5)

M. Larsson (4/5)

M. Albæk (5/5)

L. Mandal (5/5)

A. Risgaard (5/5)

R. Rexhepi (4/5)

B. Andersen (4/5)

Insecure positions:

They played in a 4-3-3 last time with B. Andersen in front alone, Mandal on the 10 and L. Pedersen on the central midfield.

Right back: E. Bramsen has started for the last two matches, but before that W. Køhler Simonsen started three in a row.

Note: They like to switch to a 3-back line in the end of the matches, both when in front and when behind.

All players are in ranked order from best to worst:

Central defenders:

A. Høyer: Better with the ball than he is defending, very good in his passing game, not always great at moving it forward

C. Østergaard, good defender, not great with the ball.

M. Henning: Similar profile to Høyer, but better at moving the ball forward. Less good in the simple passes

All the three mentioned are among the top 10 of central defenders in the league. They are strong here.

Fullbacks:

W. Køhler Simonsen: Very good offensively, especially in chance creation. He could be the reason Randers has a good crossing game. Not as good defensively. He can both be a strength and a weakness for the team

F. Konstmann: A more balanced and defensive profile than Simonsen, doesn't create chances, but passes the ball well.

E. Bramsen: poor both with and without the ball. If he plays he is the weak link.

Central midfielders:

M. Albæk: Good both with and without the ball, is very involved. Looks like a key player

L. Mandal: Good at moving the ball forward with passes. Also ok in the simple passes and defending

Wingers:

A. Risgaard: good in simple passing, not great in goalscoring or chance creation

M. Larsson: Doesn't score very well in anything

Striker:

B. Andersen: Allround good striker, can linkup, score and create chances.

R. Rexhepi: Is challenged in his passing and moving the ball forward. Can create chances and score himself.
